It is these words that haunt Snow during the night. Spoken in a deep Scottish accent, Snow often finds herself standing in front of an enormous hearth, when suddenly she finds herself staring into a pair of bright emerald eyes. Then she wakes and soon discovers that these haunting dreams are just the beginning. The next thing she knows, she is off to Scottish castle to claim an inheritance her aunt has left her. She has to stay on the lands of Lochlanna estate for six months or lose the inheritance. The castle, she is told, comes complete with butler, gardener, and electricity. But when strange things begin happening, Snow finds that the castle has another inhabitant: a ghost. Laird MacFadyne has haunted the halls of Lochlanna castle for over three hundred years. He's crossed time in search of the woman he loves, a woman he's only seen in his dreams. Having been close to the previous owner and still saddened over losing her, he's in no mood to have some lass come and take over. But when the new owner of the castle arrives, he takes one look at her and can't believe that she is the one he's come for. Can two souls, connected by dreams but live centuries apart, find a way to overcome the obstacles they face and be together?.
